Scholarships to Students from the Western Balkans

Building the future together
We all belong to different nations; we have divergent points of view, a different history and diverse traditions. In the last century we fought each other; we were enemies during the two world wars. Only as a result of mutual dialogue were we able to create the European Union or the Euro Zone. CGDC is seeking to stimulate the relevant responsible bodies into thinking more about the future, more about common projects and common gain, rather than dwelling on the past.

Know-how is the key-factor
MBA in Public Governance and Management at the MODUL University addresses – amongst others – issues in the private and public sector to create sustainability in the economy worldwide. We are awarding scholarships to students from the Western Balkans because we are convinced that giving young people know-how as well as concepts and tools to work in an intercultural and interreligious environment will further advocate the dialogue between politicians and businessmen in their home countries.

Prominent support
This scholarship is our "Commitment to Action" for the Clinton Global Initiative (CGI), with whom the CGDC has a regular collaboration.

CGI COMMITMENT MAKER 2010

MBA

Prof. Dr. Harvey Goldstein,
Dean, MBA in Public Governance and Management

Global trends in population, industrialization and the demand for non-renewable resources, economic inequality among regions, climate change, democratization, and technological change pose challenges to governance we have never had to face in the past. Our individual and collective behaviors need to change in order to secure a future planet that will provide health and sustenance to our future generations. We urgently need a new group of professionals trained in the new public management, and armed with best-practise problem-solving skills to assume leadership positions in public, private, and non-profit organizations.

Our study program aims to convey theoretical knowledge about governance concepts in both global and EU perspectives, as well as practical skills in management, public administration, and strategies for development and sustainability. It also offers the opportunity for individual specialization in more specific areas of public governance or public management issues such as sustainable development, economic development strategies, collaborative processes, dispute resolution, and managing conflicts in a culturally diverse society.

The MBA at MU Vienna is an excellent program for professionals who want to learn more about the new approaches in dealing with the interrelationships between public authorities and the private sector.

I especially enjoyed the internationality and the high professional level of the students and the jovial atmosphere. In combination with the good infrastructure and the distinguished lecturers, they create the perfect conditions for an enriching education for professionals in a very new field which has become the dominant paradigm in societal regulation.

SHAPE INNOVATIVE GOVERNANCE AND DEVELOPMENT PRACTICES

PUBLIC GOVERNANCE

The Master of Business Administration in Public Governance and Management is an internationally oriented program with a strong focus on good governance practices of institutions operating in national and international frameworks.

The shift from hierarchic government practices to cooperative and collaborative governance procedures and the recent changes of the political, social and economic conditions for public management and public administration require political actors to conduct processes of change and development in a systematic and responsible way, and to apply principles of good governance to their work within different regions and organizations.

The study program aims to convey theoretical knowledge about governance concepts in a national and global perspective, as well as practical skills in management, public administration and strategies for development and sustainability. Although the curriculum has a global orientation, there is a focus on newly democratic countries at the enlarged European Union.

It also offers the opportunity for individual specialization in more specific areas of public governance or public management issues such as managing environmental sustainability, economic development, foreign investment promotion or public sector marketing.

The MBA is organized as a program over four terms especially designed for people working full-time. A short summer break allows graduation after 18 months. Internationally recognized scholars convey their expertise in the form of blocked units, which are taught in English and mainly take place on Thursday through Sunday (approximately 14 days per semester).

A selected number of courses in the MBA Public Governance and Management are available to interested and qualified individuals not enrolled in the MBA degree program.

STUDYING IN VIENNA

QUALITY OF LIFE: VIENNA RANKS #1 WORLDWIDE

For the second consecutive year, Vienna has been acclaimed as the best city in the world when it comes to quality of living. The capital of Austria has successfully maintained its top-ranking position in the international Mercer study on the quality of living in cities.

The Mercer study takes into account 39 criteria, including the political, social and economic climate, as well as medical services, education, and infrastructure facilities, such as public transportation, power and water utilities. The cities were evaluated according to leisure facilities such as restaurants, theaters, cinemas, sports facilities, availability of consumer goods ranging from food to automobiles, and environmental factors including green space and air quality.

According to Mercer Austria, Vienna's top performance in the overall ranking is primarily based on the high degree of safety and political stability the city offers, as well as on its well-functioning infrastructure.
